How do you protect yourself from fake news? The most effective way is to only trust something once you can verify it.

Experts say fabricated headlines can mislead the public at a time when facts are crucial.

A look at what didn't happen this week. The Associated Press investigates some of the most popular but completely untrue stories and visuals of the week, and lays out the facts.

"the business model for these chatbots is to keep users engaged "as long as possible," rather than give trustworthy advice in vulnerable moments, Wright said."

Narrowly defined, "fake news" is news that is completely made up, with no verifiable facts, sources or quotes. However, "fake news" is a complex and nuanced problem.

"Everyone is entitled to his own opinion, but not his own facts." --Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Newsweek, 25 August 1986, p. How to Recognize Fake News
